When it was navy housing, there were no baseball fields, parks, or anything else available to the public. It was fine with me then and it's fine with me now. I can just keep using what is and has always been available in the area. His little park and ball field will probably always be full of residents who live there anyway, which is fine, but, the truth is whatever "extras" (bones) he's offering are not worth it. If Mary star can't have their road, well, I feel for them, but frankly that's not my problem. And I attend church there. As for a bus stop, don't make me laugh. Wouldn't they probably put some there anyway? As for anybody using it, another joke. Yes, some will ride, but just read today's times to see the article about how people will not abandon their cars even in new housing built within walking distance of good public transit. Yesterday's front page of the same paper has an article stating that we just had the least amount of rain here since the 1880's. But, what the hell, let's build 1950 units and really suck the Southland dry so bob-o can get rich. Really, I think the man's a fool. If he went for lower numbers he could already be well on his way to getting much richer and moving on to the next big money maker. He's an ignorant putz and makes it much easier to feel no sympathy towards him. As for not as many comments lately, what else is there to say that hasn't already been said? Who is "tom fields"? I can't read his website anymore. It just is so disingenuous I want to barf.
