City backs RPV call on Ponte Vista EIR

Following the lead of Rancho Palos Verdes, the Lomita City Council has asked that the draft environmental analysis for the controversial Ponte Vista housing project be recirculated.

State law requires recirculation of the analysis when "significant new information" is added, according to a letter Lomita sent to the city of Los Angeles, which has jurisdiction over the proposed San Pedro development on Western Avenue.

In this case, Lomita officials are concerned that a smaller revised project — just under 2,000 homes are now planned — could nevertheless create "new significant impacts" and a "feasible project alternative" may exist that was not previously analyzed."

Rancho Palos Verdes has made a similar request.
