

No Plans Presented

Barbara Dragich and Charley Pallares went to the meeting on Monday February 11th at Janice Hahn's office with Rosenthal/Popa and another unidentified man. They were met there by a neighbor who lives on the south east corner of 19th & Leland and who said during the meeting that she put $500,000 into remodeling her home (and I'm sure she did - it's gorgeous).

Rosenthal has now retained Svorinch and Associates, and someone from that office was there too.

No plans were presented to the assembly. When they spoke briefly about the plans (or lack of them!), Rosenthal said that the plan is for two story homes - exactly opposite of what he told Barbara on the phone Thursday night - when he indicated one story residences. She objected to this and questioned him about it.

Rosenthal did apparently have some plans (for what, is anybody's guess) but had been 'advised' not to present them (from whom this advise came, I can only guess: Svorinch's office).

Gordon did a great job of representing both Hahn and the neighbors with insisting that the development be scaled to match the existing neighborhood of R1.

Next week an informational gathering at The Cabrillo Beach Bath House will be held Thursday February 21st as part of the Coastal San Pedro Planning Committee meeting if arrangements can be made to use it that evening.

Meanwhile, VDONAC has decided to go ahead with the lawn sign order (which had been on hold) to keep interest alive and awake. Buttons will also be available.

Meanwhile, the Q Condition continues to move forward within the city bureaucracy...and it may be here before we know it!
