

Tear down Navy housing

It is with great interest that I have viewed Bob Bisno's recent advertisements for his massive Ponte Vista project. In some of the material he prominently uses a picture of a dilapidated house on his property. To the best of my recollection, the property was not in the best of condition when he bought it, but was nothing like it is today. The property became what it is today under "Bisno's watch," not the Navy's.

If Bob Bisno is truly interested in being a good neighbor and doing what is best for the community, why hasn't he torn down the structures? Don't they have to come down anyhow? In fact, wasn't it a condition of the sale that Bisno tear down the houses?
